Egypt seeks solution

CAIRO, April 26 (Agencies) — President Hosni Mubarak called Monday for a quick solution to the last remaining demarcation dispute between Egypi and Israel, declaring Egypt will not "concede one incb of our

The president, in a 63-minute speech before the Peoples' Assembly, said "We will strive for a quick and just solution to the dispute that Israel has started on area demarcation in the Taba area." The dispute remains unsettled despite Israel's withdrawal from the rest of the Sinai peninsula.

"We have no demands but that of justice and we have no interest in territorial expansion, but at the same time we shall not concede and we do not have the power to concede one-inch of our sacred land and we reject any bargaining on this...." Mubarak

Israel has withdrawn to the line recognized by Egypt at Taba, south of the port of Eilat, and Egypt's forces have advanced to the line recognized by tsrael. The multi-national peacekeeping force is in Taba, and negotiations on the dispute are continuing. "We insist on the return of our sovereignty on that spot of territory that falls within our boundaries," said Mubarak.

Mubarak praised the late President Anwar Sadat and said the withdrawal from Sinai was Sadat's achievement, He also thanked the United States for its efforts in mediating

He said the basis for the U.S.-sponsored Camp David formual was the need to solve the Palestinian problem; and added Egypt looked forward to a resumption in the near future of talks with Israel on self-rule fur the Palestinians in Israeli-occupied lands.

Mubarak criticized Israel for boilding Jewish settlements oo occupied Arab land. "Egypt does not represent the Palestinian people or speak on their behalf," he said. "But on the other hand, none of us wishes to see the continuation of occupation and consolidation of Israeli control over Palestinian

Denying that Egypt bad forsaken the Palestinian cause, Mubarak said Egypt would persevere with negotiations on Palestinian autonomy in the occupied West Bank and Gaza. As a first step, he said, Israel should remove its military government and permit election of self-ruling Arab administration

Meanwhile, an Egyptian Foreign Ministry spokesman Monday deoled a report by Israeli officials that a provisional agreement on the Taba demarcation dispute had been signed. "We have not signed any agreement yet," the spokesman, Raouf Ghoniem, said.

The Israeli officials had said that representatives of the two countries and the United States had signed the agreement during Sunday night and that it provided, for further negotiations. Ghoniem said U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Walter Stoessel was due in Cairo for more talks on the issue.

In a first-ever joint Israeli-Egyptian telecast, Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin and Mubarak said Sunday they want peace forever. But others interviewed during the hour-long program by Israeli, media expressed doubt that the return of the Sinai to Egypt was enough to assure peace if the Palestinian problem is not resolved.

Begin said Israel took a military risk by giving up so much occupied territory "but the essential thing is that our two countries have agreed there will never be war again, never any more bloodshed and that peace will reign between them forever."

Mubarak said he is proud of the Egyptian people, who had always been "a spearhead of

The White House carlier had issued a written statement that it formally took "note" of Israel's return of the Sinai to Egypt. In Canberra, Australian Foreign Minister Tony Street said Monday the return of the Sinai marked the end of a chapter in the Middle East conflict. This was one step in the process of confidence-building and created a model for future stability in the region, he added.

In Moscow, the Soviet Union Monday condemned the Israeli handover of Sinai to Egypt and said Cairo had gained the territory at the cost of betraying the Palestinians. An official statement issued by Tass news agency called Sunday's ceremonies held in this connection were a farce.

Argentina takes case

WASHINGTON, April 26 (AP) -Argentina is taking its case against Britain in the Falkland Islands crisis to the Organization of American States after announcing a suspension of indirect negotiations to end the conflict peacefully.

The 21 parties to the 1947 Rio Treaty, including the United States, were convening at OAS headquarters Monday. But it was unclear whether Argentina would seek to impose hemispheric sanctions against Britain under the treaty's collective defense pri:isions. The meeting is being beld at the foreign ministers' level.

Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez told reporters Sunday night that indirect negotiations with Britain to end the crisis were being temporarily suspended Argentine submarine and the landing of British military forces on South Georgia Island. "For us, this means no negotiations with Britain for the time being," he said. This contradicted an earlier statement in which Costa Mendez suggested there would be no let up in Argentina's efforts to achieve peace. "Diplomacy never ends," he said. Costa Mendez said the British military action would have "grave consequences for peace" but added later under questioning: "1 think we can prevent conflict, yet."

A majority of OAS members sympathize with the Argentine position on grounds that Britain's 149-year control over the Islands was a legacy of British colonial rule. But it was not clear whether Argentina could muster the two-thirds majority required to impose sanctions against Britain.

180 taken prisoners

U.K. recaptures island's 2 ports

LONDON, April 26 (AP) — The commander of Argentice forces on the Falkland Islands dependency of South Georgia surrendered Monday morning after British troops recaptured the Island's two main ports, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher told the House of Commons

She said some 180 Argentine prisoners were taken in the assault which began Sunday morning with a landing at the largest port, Grytviken, followed by the securing of Leith harbor Monday.

Entering the house to the cheers of her supporters, Mrs. Thatcher congratulated the British Marines who carried out the operation, but added, "I should like to emphasize that the repossession of South Georgia in no way alters the government's determination to achieve a negotiated solution to the current

She said she regretted the decision by Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa Mendez to break off talks with U.S. Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. in Washington. Haig bas sought to mediate a settlement to the confrontation sparked by Argentina's seizure of the Falklands April 2 and South Georgia a day later.

"As the British task force approaches closer to the Falklands, the urgent need is to speed up the negotiations," sbe said.

Mrs. Thatcher said in retaking South Georgia, British forces were told to use minimum force. As a result, she said, there had been only one serous injury to an Argentine seaman. Those captured were not prisoners-of war, Mrs. Thatcher said, as "a state of war does not exist between ourselves and Argentina." They will be returned to Argentina, she said. "about 200 prisoners were taken, including up to 50 military reinforcements who had been on the Argentinian submarine" Santa Fe, hit by British forces in the opening stages of the operation, M.s. Thatcher said.

Michael Foot, leader of the Labor Party opposition, praised the "extreme skill" with which the British landing was carried out, but warned of a "deepening sense of anxiety throughout the country" over the crisis. He urged that the United Nations should be asked to help in settling the dispute, saying "the search for peace must never be torpedoed by us."

Mrs. Thatcher said: "We share that anxiety." and added: "Yes of course we seek for peace. But we did not break the peace. While we search for peace, our people, British people, are under the occupation of the Argeotinian invaders." Costa Mendez said Sunday that his country the two-hour South Georgia battle Sunday. Press Association defense correspondent Robert Hutchinson said British forces would likely attack the main Falkland Islands 200 miles (1,285kms) northwest of South Georgia "within the next 48 hours" The likelihood, Hutchinson said, is that British troops will establish "some kind of bridgehead" in the remoter areas of the Falklands to pressure the Argentines into coming to diplomatie terms over the sovereignty of the South Atlantic colony, ruled by Britain since 1833, but long claimed by Argentina, which seized the lightly defended islands on April 2 and 3.

Meanwhile, British newspapers this morning almost unanimously praised Sunday's recapture of South Georgia Island from Argentina.

The mass-circulation Sun commented: Down in the south Atlantic, far from home in bleak weather and heavy seas, brave men bave given Britain back her honor." Nobody in Britain wants war, said the Sun. "But let the junta beware. Once Britain makes up her mind, her determination is made of steel." The leading article of the Daily Mail said:

After all the posturings and propaganda. There must be a sense of relief at the news that British forces have now landed on South Georgia. Indeed it is a boost to learn that the redoubtable special boat squadron bas been there since last Thursday."
The Daily Express editorialized: "It is clear that the cabinet saw no hope of reaching a satisfactory settlement with Argentina through negotiation alone. We have not started the war. We are, however, continuing with it. The alternative would have been to surrender.

The Times of London captioned that "the landing on South Georgia takes the Falklands crisis into a new and potentially still more dangerous phase. But it is consistent with international law and with the British strategy of seeking to remove Argentine control by a proportionate response."

In Washington as the Organization of American States (OAS) took up Argentina's charge of British aggression in a dispute over the Falkland Islands Monday, President Reagan warned that time was running out for a peaceful settlement.

Secretary of State Alexander Haig, ending suspense over wbether he would head the U.S. delegation to the special OAS ministerial meeting, made no statement and looked grim as be arrived for closed consultations to work out details of the public session later in

Bush reaffirms pledge to defend S. Korea

SEOUL, April 26 (R) - Despite growing anti-American sentiment among South Korean opposition groups because of official U.S. support uf the Seoul government, President Reagan Monday said he was encouraged hy the actions of President Chun Doo Hwan.

"I believe that the steps you have taken toward national reconciliation since you took office last year are most encouraging," the president said in a letter handed to Chun by visiting U.S. Vice President George Bush.

"I would sincerely hope that the restoration of stability in Korea would permit the continuation of that process in the future," said the letter, which added that Bush's visit underscored American determination to help Korea deter aggression.

Meanwhile a South Korean government spokesman said Bush, in an hour-long meeting with Chun, reaffirmed U.S. commitment to the defense of South Korea and made clear that there would be no change in American policy toward Communist North Korea.

The lawyers, who refused the use of their names, said Ecevit is charged with violating a military ban on public political statements by former party leaders and faces a minimum prison term of three

SEIZURE OF S. GEORGIA

The British landing in South Georgia, that remote, icy almost uninhabited island in the southernmost end of the world, may actually speed up the process of a peaceful settlement of the festering dispute between Britain and Argentina. It is so far from the main Falkland Islands that the Argentines could not have successfully defended it without incurring heavy losses. The British too would have paid a high and bloody price for their seizure.

Perhaps Argentine leaders wanted the island to fall into British hands in order to return to the British part of the self-respect that they lost when the islands fell into Argentine hands earlier this month. The seizure, or recovery as the British say, may mollify British pride and make a negotiated settlement probable having chastened the Argentines and shown the world at large that Britain is still a power to be reckoned with and which can do battle thousands of miles away from home.

The Argentines must have known this all along. British papers and military analysts have been announcing openly that the first task of the British fleet will be to recover South Georgia from which British aircraft will be sent out to pound Argentine positions in the main islands. Pictures of the island and descriptions of its terrain were featured regularly in the British papers until 24 hours before the landing was carried out.

The seizure will help boost Mrs. Thatcher's image at home, rally the British around their government, and restore some of their self-esteem which they had lost when the Argentines slapped them in the face. It will also give them added prestige to negotiate from a position of strength even if, in the end, they are forced to make concessions.

The Argentines will put a fight and may well cost the British a lot of casualties since they are better entrenched and have shorter lines of communications. To give up the islands now will cost the regime in Buenos Aires whatever little support it may have gained and may well bring its demise in a national uprising of dreadful consequences.

The British may decide to inflict more damage on the Argentines both in the islands and mainland airports before they can feel they have sufficiently retaliated and are ready to talk things over across the table.

Saudi Arabian press review

Al Madinah newspaper Monday should at least retrain from resortcalled for an Islamic Security Council as a substitute for the U.N. Security Council, capable of imposing economic and political sanctions on the state harming Islamic interests.

Commenting on America's use of the right of veto at the Security Council to block a draft resolution censuring Israeli practices against the Arabs, the paper said: "Ever since President Reagan assumed power at the White House, the U.N. Security Council became a sort of an American jazz band....

"Muslims should realize that it is in fact the United States which is fighting them, and there is no one who harbors hatred against Islam and Muslims more than President Reagan," it added.

This is irrespective of whether those involved are Israel. the United States, the Soviet Union or other state."

The paper appealed to Islamic states especially the Organization of Islamic Conference "to consider the formation of an Islamie Security Council with powers to impose economic and political, sanctions un the United States whenever it tries to use the veto against the aspirations of the

Uruguay fears third world war over Falklands

By Mary Helen Spooner

Chile and Uruguay have signed a joint statement indirectly criticizing Argentina's use of force in the Falkland Islands, and Uruguayan President Gen. Gregorio Alvarez has said the crisis in the South Atlantic could lead to a third world war.

.. The : ioint : communique, signed during Gen. Alvanez's numitay: state visit to Santiago, contains passages condemning terrorism and subversion as well as "the use or threatened use of force international disputes.

The statement reaffirms both countries' adherence to "the norms of international law and the fundamental rules of civilized coexistence." Both Uruguay and Gen. Augusto Pinocher's military government had earlier issued statements calling for a peaceful resolution to the Falklands dispute.

The meetings between Pinochet and Alvarez, whose visit to Chile had been arranged several months earlier, did not necessarily concentrate on the Falklands crisis. Diplomatic sources in Santiago said the two military heads of state would probably have "traded impressions" of the conflict. Alvarez avoided direct comment on the issue during his visit. At a press conference he sidestepped a question about what position Uruguay would take in the event of an armed clash between Argentina and Britain, saying such policy statements would be more appropriately made in Monteviden. He did, however, express his government's fear that the conflict would spread.

"We are afraid that this problem could reach nut only the rest of the continent, but the whole world.". he said. "We are in the shadow of World War

He described the European Economic Community's decision to boycott Argentine goods as a "dangerous precedent" for future action against a developing country, but qualified the remark by saying he preferred to nmit the case of Argentina

Uruguay has offered itself as a possible site for peace talks between Argentina and Britain.

Even his friends would admit that Alexander

Haig is not cut out for delicate shuttle diplomacy, especially if it involves crossing several time zones. At best, U.S. secretary of state has a pricklish disposition. And when he tires, as he often does after 12 hours because of his double bypass heart operation, he can become very testy, which is why some people get worried about his being in charge — worried for America . and worried for Haig.

Wherever you look - the Atlantic Alliance, the Middle East, Central America, the failure to predict what happened in Poland, the whole superpower relationship - American foreign policy is in a mess. It has never yet spoken with the single voice promised by President Reagan a year ago, and there are: those who say there was never much chance of that because of Haig's personality and background.

He is basically a soldier, not a statesman, and he can't seem to make the change however hard he tries. Some of the things he says, apparently in all seriousness, make reasonable people go weak at the knees. Like the time he tried to persuade the United States Congress to resume arms sales to Argentina (well before the Falklands crisis). One of the reasons for resuming sales, he said, was because of the compatibility of views between the two governments.

Such comments have made people wonder how far this man is willing to go to achieve his ends. The fear is not allayed by Haig's pugnacious public posture, his head pressed down into his shoulders and his jaw thrust forward, like a bulldog, nor by his: persistent military airs and his deliberate, but not persuasive, high-pitched speech that radiates uncertainty.

Yet when it has seemed, over the last 12 months, that Haig could be eased out of the administration any alternative has always seemed much worse,

Thanks to Haig, U.S. foreign policy is in a mess By Peter Pringle even trightening, especially for the Western WASHINGTON -

When Reagan made Haig secretary of state it was not only the man's unpredictable personality that raised eyebrows. He was a familiar and somewhat soiled figure on the Washington scene - "a man of more ambition than talent, someone whose political scars, if they were campaign ribbons, would match the collection already pinned to his tunic," as The Washington Post said at the time. The scars were from his closeness to his former bosses in the dark days of the early seventies — to Richard Nixon and his telephone taps. Yet Haig survived. He survived attacks on his personality, the skismishes of the incompetent former national security adviser. Richard Allen, a public flogging from the president's Rig Three silvistrator wanting to be in control when Reagan was shot, and a series of undisguised attempts by the secretary of defense, Caspar Weinberger, to upstage him. In recent months his relations with the White House seemed to be on the mend. The tawdry squabbles of last year have been noticeably absent. When the Falklands crisis came along, he accepted this high-profile job of shuttle mediator apparently with gusto. It was just what he liked: to be in command, to be at center stage, to drive his body with its stitched up heart to its limit for America, the non-Communist world, and, of course, for Haig.

Haig was first spotted for political office during the Johnson administration. He became military assistant to the then secretary of the army, Cyrus Vance, and then deputy to Joe Califano, the special assistant to Defense Secretary Robert MacNamara.

During the transition to the Nixon administration, Califano recommended Haig for the post of military assitant to Kissinger, Nixon's national security adviser. Within a year he had become Kissinger's deputy, and as such, played a key role in the wiretapping of journalists and the bombing of

His exact part in the wiretapping was re-examined again recently in a new biography of Kis-singer by Seymour Hersh. Using unpublished files from the Watergate prosecutors office, Hersh says that Kissinger and Haig lied or distorted their involvement in the wiretap program authorized by Nixon from 1969 to 1971, Hersh alleges: "Haig did more than merely know what was going on in the White House: he was part of it."

刘宗和太子。 A的政权、 27、 198

Haig has never been charged with any illegal actions, but he has been attacked for displaying almost blind loyalty to Nixon and he has been accused of misleading the Watergate prosecutors. To his admirers this was just an expression of his loyalty. His patriotism. He says he resigned from his job of MATO mittery child for the land reaches. "My conscience wouldn't permit nie to continue because I was in such profound personal disagree-

Throughout Haig's term of office assecretary of state it has been the Europeans who have always admitted privately that they are glad he is there. They knew him before and continue to be comfortable with him. He has, indeed, been a voice of moderation in a sea of ludicrous demands by Reagan's lunatic right-wing, demands which the White House Big Three have been eager to embrace rather than be caught hobsobbing with the more experienced Haig.

Haig's allies say this has been Haig's real problem: he cares about the outcome and they don't. He's a professional in a band of yahoos," as one of them put it.

His critics would not dissent, but they would emphasize his wild oscillations between displays of brimming confidence and acute insecurity, plus the perennial fact that, as it has always been, he may be in favor at Reagan's court this week and next week he may be out of a job. (ONS)

PARIS -

French state-owned television last week put out a peak-viewing program on Argentine repression with a harrowing account of the disappearance of two French nuns among the 16,000 people missing since the establishment of a military regime six As the television service is directly subject to

'ministerial control by the Socialist government, the timing of the bnur-lnng dramatized documentary was a clear sign that France is now emotionally involved with a British success in the Falklands affair, as well as being Britain's first political ally. A complex series of arguments ranging from Socialist preoccupation with toppling extreme right-wing regimes in Latin America to long-term interests in the European Economic Community and scattered French dependencies has led to unstinting diplomatic support for Britain since the Falklands Islands invasion. French officials are congratulating themselves on rapid decision-making by President Francois Mitterrand and his strongly pro-EEC foreign minister, Claude Cheysson, which they believe will affect Britain's attitude toward Europe in the future. The ambiguous approach of the United States led one foreign affairs official to say: "The British must now know who they can depend on in a crisis."

It is doubtful, though, whether France's diplomatic attitude would have been so clear-cut against Argentina without pressures from inside the Socialist Party as well as advice to Mitterrand both from bis wife, Danielle, and his adviser on Latin American questions, Regis Debray.

Madame Mitterrand is a spokesman for a strong Latin American lobby in the French Socialist Party, where affairs like the fall of Salvador Allende's left-wing government in Chile exercise a fascination, similar to that of Spain on the pre-war Left. She has been credited with persuading the president to send arms to Nicaragua.

However, the party believes that Mitterrand has been dragging his feet on the question of right-wing dictaturships since taking sides on the issue with Mexico immediately after the presidential election To revive the commitment, the Socialist Party was based nn solidarity inside the Common Market, with a secondary glance at France's scattered dependencies in the Indian Ocean, Caribbean and Pacific, several of which are subject to dispute.

Although difficulties in the EEC are strongest in relation to British-French arguments over the British hudget and the Common Agricultural Policy (which favors France), no trade-off was demanded by France for its outspoken support in the Security Council and its strongly pro-British diplomacy inside the EEC which led to the trade boycott and arms ban. There is little doubt that if the French had been cool to Britain, EEC policy would be much

Chevsson believes this demonstration of unity will have a payoff. Foreign ministry officials refer both to the psychological effect that it could have in the argument of eventual British withdrawal from the Common Market, as well as the short-term benefits of Britain feeling obliged to compensate for sacrifices made on its behalf. The loss to Europe in South American trade could be lasting. In the case of the French, for instance, they have sacrificed one of the most important principles in arms deals - that signed contracts will not be affected by temporary political

They have had to stop deliveries of pre-paid carrier-borne jets, missile systems and spare parts, as well as calling off a pending armored car deal cancellations that could affect arms sales discussions in other sensitive areas of the world.

One of world's most beautiful zoos is in Delhi

Alkhobar Bureau

NEW DELHI - The tourist fidgeted nervously in the yellow and blue trolley that trundles tourists around the Delhi zoo, Five, ten, then twenty minutes passed after the scheduled departure time. In the hundreds, Indian sightseers streamed past on foot - the women in bright flowered saris, the men somber in white shirts, navy or gray pants the kids in shorts, babbling and shricking with excitement. They stared up curiously at the foreigner still waiting in the trolley and irritnbly twidding his thumbs. Eventually a driver bustled up to announce that the trolley would not be running that hour. "The normal man is not here sitting in the trolley," he explained. "The normal man does not pay for trolley. He goes by foot."

Reluctantly the tourist climbed down to mingle with the crowds, dreading the grubby hands begging baksheesh. Inevitably the street urchins followed with their litany of 'one rupee...chocolates...ball-point pen...'

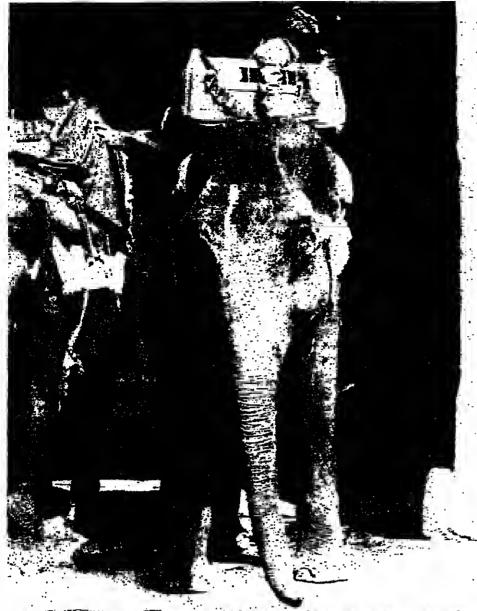

Such nuisances notwithstanding, the only way to see the Delhi zoo is hy foot. To view it from the tourist trolley would be, to recall Frances Cornford's lines, like watking through the fields with gloves on "when the grass is as soft as the breast of doves and shivering-sweet to the touch."

An earlier poet and nature lover, Walt Whitman, wished to "live with the animals, they are so placid and self-contained. They do not sweat and whine about their condition...not one knecks to another, nor to his kind that lived thousands of years ago."

Such equality may reign among the animals in the 200, but 200 keepers, street urchins and many of the 1.3 million Indians who visit the zoo each year know who the king of the heasts is. And some are eager to share the secret for n little baksheesh; they crook their fingers and beckon the foreign tourist to follow down the tree-lined path to see the white tigers, the pale specimens of the species who reign supreme in the zoo - at leasts as far as the humans are concerned.

Like the animals, the birds make no distinction among their human admirers. The rich and the ragamuffins stretch out their hands, begging the peacock to fan his feathers in the irridescent wheel of fire. But the peacock just struts hack and forth, his tail sticking out behind him like a twig broom.

On field trips to the zoo. Delhi schoolboys quickly pick up the ranking of the animals. They know a tiger (a white one at least) rates higher than the Hoodlum gibbon, the gibbon Bystanders throw halled-up newspapers at the chimps. The male claws up small stones, and holds them aloft, taunting his own tormentors, and poised as if to throw them. The chimp is one of the rare males in the zoo.

- "The males tend to run amuck in captivity." explained a zoo official. Consequently, there is little breeding. Exchange, gifts and purchase are how the Delhi zoo gets its animals. The only young were a two-year old tiger, a month-old antelope, and a 4month-old rhino, nuzzling his thick-skinned Luckiest of the animals are the leopards in their long, high-domed cage, so overgrown hy morning glory that it seems a bower rather than a cage. As they pace and stretch, do they roam imaginary jungles? They look too beautiful to be bored. Do they brood in captivity? And what do they make of the endless repetition of faces staring across at them? Do they blunt their sight to bars and wire and dream instead of vast jungle and forest?

Zoo animals do not suffer the tedium long. They die young, here, as they do in the wild. The spiral-horned eland; the Samhar deer; any one of the remaining 800 Indian wild asses which can run as fast as a horse; the long-snouted sloth bear, the African lion: a meager 15 to 20 years is their allotment unlike man's more generous three score years

Not all suffer this ennui. The silver-flashing minnow-small moley fish leap against the current up a 2-foot dam in a 200 creek. Half the length of your little finger, these plucky creatures lightly jump 20 times their height. Nnt one reaches the top. Just as well, for if one did, the current would sweep him down as surely as Sisyphus's rock forever hurtled down the mountainside in the Greek myth.

Zoos are as old as history. The ancient Egypnans had them. So too did Kuhla Khan who according to Marco Polo kept lions and tigers in his pleasure dome at Xanadu, Solomon had monkeys and peacocks and Nehuchadnezzaar kept lions. In the 8th century, the legendary Caliph Haroun Al Rashid sent an clephant and monkeys to Charlemagne much as the Chinese today proffer good-will pandas. LOS ANGELES, (LAT) - The new Paul McCartney album Tug of Wor, contains a song about John Lennon. Titled "Here Today," it's a deeply personal ballad in the "vesterday" tradition.

McCartney, who will be 40 in June, reconstracts it figul dialogue with Lemian. Gying ta break through the public feud of the post-Beatles years to re-establish the strong entotional bonds that he felt still existed.

During a brief stop in Los Angeles to record some vocal tracks for the next Michael Jackson album, McCartney spoke about the

Said is no wonder there is a lot of reflection in the new Tag of War album, easily the most satisfying work from McCartney since his Band on the Run, and Venus and Mars period in the mid '70s.

For all his craftsmanship, McCartney has been frequently ridiculed by critics for the lack of substance in his music. But Tag of War abounds with cummentary, though much of it is puckaged in such bright colors that the lp's tune remains hopeful. The album, which reunites McCartney with Beutles producer George Martin, features such guest Musiciam as Stevic Wonder, Ringo Starr, Carl Blue Suede Shoes Perkins and bassist Stanley Clarke.

The tracks on Tug of War range from the reassuring Somebody Who Cares to the title tune, a richly designed but melancholy statement that outlines the album's primary theme about life's struggles. The most immediately accessible number is Ebeny and Ivory, a graceful expression of brotherhood that features a duet with Stevic Wonder. Released as a single. Eliony and Ivory is the lastest-rising recent, immeally, since John Lennon's Imagine a decade ago.

About the alhum's reflective theme, McCartney said: At une time, I didn't think life was a tug of war. Even when I wrote 'When I 'm 64, ' I had the feeling that everythiog was possible. Tho age 64 seemed as far away to me as 150.

"It's not until you get into your 30s that you start seeing the other side of it. You see are irrational and beyond your control. You suddenly begin to realize how delicate every-

McCartney responded quickly and seemed especially pleased with his new album and was excited about working with musicians the caliber of Wonder and Jackson.

QUESTION: Why did you decide to work with (Beatles producer) George Martin again". Do you think you may have avoided working with him befure because of his ties to the Beatles days?

ANSWER: "Sure. I did 'Live and Let Die ' with him, but never a whole album. I don't think I could have for a while. After the Beatles break-up, everything was so weird. Everyone was warring and we didn't want to be around anything or anyone who reminded us of the pain. In my shows. I wouldn't even do Beatles songs at first. They almost had to ak my arm to out me to even du Vesterdov which was silly because I loved a lot of those

"The thing is, I had to convince myself there was life for me after the Beatles, so I couldn't very well go back to George (Martin) because he was part of the Beatles. Eventually, though, you get over all that."

Losses threaten famous auction houses

LONDON. (R) — Sothehy's, the auction house that has sold everything from a satellite channel to African zebras, is expecting to lose money this year for the first time in its 269-year history.

Lord Westmoreland, head of Sotheby's, predicted that low sales volume would mean a pre-tax loss for the financial year ending in July when he announced earlier this month that he was stepping down as part of a major overhant of management.

Other major international auction houses like Sotheby's crosstown rival, Christics, are simply not doing enough business because investing in the world of art has lost much of its allure, according to art dealers.

The antiques husiness, from which the auction houses earn their bread and buttet, has fallen flat, both because of the recession and the attractiveness of high interest rates that are far less risky than fragile purcelain vases. The days when socialities and curiosityseekers jostled for space in the auction rooms to witness sales of the great masters and furnishings ltim the palaces of Europe have become few and far between,

Christies said recently that while it expected to report a profit this year, its volume of business was madequate when measered against sharply rising costs. But the financial problem is more acute at Sothely's. where the number of employees has been cut by 20 percent and operations are being streamlined in keeping with the slower pace of business. The prospect of a kes this year is in sharp contrast to last year's profits all over S12.25 million.

An auction showroom in London's fashionable Belgravia district is being shut down, for example, and sales operations in London consolidated at Sotheby's headquarters in Bond Street. Some matket analysis, who have watched Sutheby's shares retreat this year because of the grim impacial outlook, believe further retrenchments in the firm's operations in over 20 countries might be needed to ride out the slump.

Sothery's and Christies are also suffering from their decision to charge both the buyet and seller commissions, which they argued was essential because of the mounting costs for such things as printing expensive catalogs and advertising sales.

Dealers say they have made it clear to the auction houses that they deeply resent double-charging - previously only the seller paid commission - and some suggest they are looking for ways to bypass the rooms at Sutheby's and Christies.

Stock market analysts, however, doubt whether the loss of husiness to other channels poses a real challenge to the major auction houses, which over the years have huilt up a vast network of customers around the wurld,

Analysts say that while the auction houses can count on a steady trade in important works of art as they are placed on the market, the big expansion of the art market in recent years has been at the lower end of the scale.

Japanese 731st unit conducted experiments on prisoners of war

TOKYO (AP) - The best-selling book in Japan since early this year has been a documentary of Japanese Imperial Army atrocities against prisoners during World War IL a tale of horror which testifies that the war still gnaws at the national conscience and profits its storytellers.

"Akuma No Hoshoku" (The Devil's Gluttony) describes the Kwantung army's topsecret 731st unit. It is believed to have killed as may as 3,000 Chinese, Soviet and Korean prisoners during the war in carrying out a gruesome array of bacteriological and other

The story told by author Seiichi Morimura - normally a popular writer of best-selling mysteries - is not entirely new, but since its release in December the book has sold 700,000 copies, the hottest item among several World War il-related books and movies that currently are educating, enlightening and sometimes shocking the Japanese.

By cootrast with most material, in which Japan rarely is depicted as a transgressor, Morimura's book tells in horrifying detail how the germ warfare unit in Manchuria injected victims with typhus, cholera and plague germs, did live dissections, froze prisoners to death in cold-endurance tests, hlasted prisoners apart in grenade tests, and, wheo Soviet troops arrived at war's end, gassed the last POWs to death.

(An article in the U.S. publication, the hulletin of the atomic scientists, last year claimed that some American prisoners were involved in the tests. It said this was confirmed in a 1956 FB1 memo, and also said U.S. authorities knew it when they chose not to try the Japanese responsible as war criminals supposedly in exchange for data obtained in the experiments.

Another example of the popularity of war themes was Japan's most popular 1981 movie, Brengo Kantai (The Grand Fleet), a saga of Japan's navy from Pearl Harbor to the sinking of the super battleship Yamato in 1945. The film's makers, Toho, plan three more World War II films this year.

The rival Toci Company will soon release a movie in which the hero is Japan's wartime prime minister, Gcn. Hideki Tojo, who was executed as a war criminal. The film reportedly treats him with relative sympathy.

One major publisher has begun selling a 20-volume, detailed history of the Pacific air war, while another offers a 17-volume series of personal war experiences heavily laced with suffering and self-justifications. Japan's vocal anti-war groups are concerned about the "war boom" and the impressions it may have on Japanese youth, who are taught little about their nation's march to military self-destruction.

"Young people go to war movies today the way we went to American Westerns or Samurai films when we were kids," said Ryozo Watanabe, sociology of law professor at Tokyo University. "It's all ancient history to them, with no meaning to their lives."

By contrast with the dry, rather objective tone of such films is the West German pictur Das Boot, a World War Ii U-boat epic not playing to large audiences in Tokyo, Japan ese war movies are "emotional, tragic antearful," said the major daily Asahi Shimbun.

Typical is Toho's soon-to-be-release Himeyuri-No-V to 59 (Himeyuri Tower), in which several young female pop stars have leading roles in telling the well-known stor of a group of schoolgirls killed in the U.S invasion of Okinawa in 1945.

Despite interest in war themes, the Japan ese - more than half of whom were bor since the 1945 surrender — show little inter est in Japan's imperial past, Watanabe said A survey by the Yomiuri Shimbun foun

A battle for the hearts and minds of indif ferent youth is being fought over school text books, with the pro-defense conservative government trying to tone down critical accounts of Japan's involvement, while other groups urge more graphic treatment of war

Japan's large and active anti-war factions including novelists and moviemakers, gener ally condemn war only from the standpoint of Japan's own suffering - three million casual ties, fire bombings of its cities and atomic attacks on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. The Imperial Army's hrutal subjugation of mucl of Asia is not mentioned.

'Unlike Germany, which purged its Nazis there is little consciousness here of havin fought an aggressive war. Japanese tend to forget had things quickly," Watanabe said Thus, he said, young Japanese have only vague knowledge of the army's massacre o civilians at Nanking, or the cruelty of colonia rule in Korea and Taiwan.

He said that although the germ unit activities were touched on at war trihunals in Khaharovsk, Siberia, after the war and is various historical accounts, few Japanes knew of its existence.

One reason, he said, was that unit mem bers, sworn to secrecy when the war ended have only now begun to "unload their bur den," but it is also a story, he said, that Japanese have not been eager to hear.

Morimura said he received 1,000 letter and telephone calls, some branding him : "Communist" or a "traitor," but most from young people expressing surprise and shock that their own nation was capable of suc savagery.

New Brazil reservation protects Amazon tribe

BRASILIA, Brazil (API - The Yanomani Indians, one of the last and largest primitive tribes in South America, have scored at least a temporary victory over the advance of white civilization in the Amazon jungle.

Interior Minister Mario Andreazza recently signed a hill creating a huge reservation for the Yanomanis in northern Brazil, along the border with Venezuela in an area about the size of Belgium and Switzerland combined.

The hill means, at least in theory, that the Yanomanis can contioue their nomadic lifestyle, free from incursions by poachers and fortune seekers looking for the uranium. gold, diamonds and tin believed to exist in the region.

"Our joh is to win their confidence and give them support," he said.

Leal said that Funai planned to create 10 control posts in strategic areas in the new reservation to look after the 8.400 Yanomanis believed to live in the region.

About the same number are thought to live in Venezuela, according to the Venezuelan Embassy here. But they apparently are less threatened by "civilization" than their Brazilian counterparts because the area is still far from being settled. The Yanomanis - also known as the when highway workers discovered radioactive minerals in the Surucucu Mountains. near Yanomani land. The discovery attracted waves of prospectors. And with them they brought germs and diseases that often proved deadly to the Yanomanis. International organizations supportive of primitive peoples began to express concern for the future of the tribe. "A common cold frequently was fata! to the Indians because they had no defense mechanisms against the germs," said a Funa spokesman who asked not to be identified "Many, perhaps dozens, died." The highway was abandoned, however, is

But the current governor, as well as othe local officials, say they will protect the Yanomanis, and they point to the new reser vation as proof. Indian experts have praised the creation of the Yanomani reservation. At the same time however, they admit that sooner or later the tribe will be absorbed by the white civiliza tion that surrounds them. "There are no niches or glass houses th

Quasars appear as pinpoints of intense light; astronomers take a closer look at their center

By George Alexander

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — A team of California Institute of Technology astronomers has found the first substantive evidence that quasars — those extremely bright, mysterious objects scattered throughout the heavens — are actually located at the centers of star-filled galaxies.

Astronomers have long believed quasars to be the active nuclei of galaxies, but have so far been unable to see a galaxy surrounding a quasar clearly. This is because quasars are so distant that they appear on telescopes as little more than pinpoints of intense light. Moreover, their hrightness swamps the light of anything else in their immediate vicinity, although some astronomers have detected little patches of faint, "fuzzy" light around

Now, using sensitive electronic detectors attached to the 200-inch Palomar Mountain telescope near San Diego, Prof. J. Beverley Oke and research fellow, Todd A. Boroson bave peered very closely at the "fuzz" surrounding the quasar 3C 48 (its catalogue designation) and found the telltale radiation of not one, but millions upon millions of stars—a galaxy.

Oke and Boroson were aided considerably by n computer that subtracted the light of both the quasar itself and the luminosity of the night sky from the image recorded by the Palomar telescope, leaving only the faint light of the quasar's surrounding "fuzz."

When the two Caltech astronomers then did a spectographic analysis of that fuzzy light, they found that certain wavelengths were missing. These missing wavelengths, called "absorption lines," were those of hydrogen, calcium and magnesium — all elements found in stars.

"What these lines mean," Oke said in an interview from Palomar where he is making a new series of observations, "is that there's a lot of gas surrounding (the quasar 3C 48) and something has caused that gas to condense into stars."

Although they cannot make out the exact shape of the galaxy that envelops the quasar, which is 5 billion light-years away (a light-year is approximately 6 trillion miles), the pattern of the starlight is very similar to that which astronomers have seen in pinwbeel-like spiral galaxies.

This came as something of a surprise, Oke said, hecause most astronomers bave been inclined to think that quasars would be associated with cigar-shaped elliptical galax-

"Our prejudice for ellipticalls," Oke said, "is based on the fact that the radio noise from quasars is similar to that which we have seen coming from elliptical galaxies. So we have tended to think that when we could make out the underlying galaxy (of a quasar), it would be an elliptical."

Oke and Boroson were also surprised by the additional suggestion that the stars in the galaxy surrounding quasar 3C 48 are of the hot, young variety, and not of the hypothesized cool, older stars.

If this finding is corroborated, Oke said, it implies that shock waves coming from the quasar are still triggering bursts of star forma-

This finding of an underlying galaxy for 3C 48 does not answer the question of exactly what a quasar is. The model most widely accepted by astronomers is that a quasar is a massive black hole lying at the center of a galaxy, one that is inexorable sucking in a stream of gas and dust.

As that matter swirls inward, it becomes so roiled by the black hole's immensely powerful gravitational fields that it emits n wide range of radiation. "It's model," Oke said of this construct for a quasar, "that is capable of generating the energies we see in quasars and the radiation we see. It's a model that makes sense."

Instead of a photographic plate, the Caltech astronomers used an array of very sensitive electronic sensors called "ehargecoupled devices" to capture the faint light of quasar 3C 48's galaxy. These devices generate electrical signals that n computer can handle more efficiently than an ordinary photographic emulsion.

Studies probe genetic defect By Kesy Davidson

SAN DIEGO, (LAT) — A genetic defect that triggers Lesch-Nyhan Syndrome, a severe type of mental retardation, may be better understood by University of California at San Diego researchers.

Three University of California researches in collaboration with two Stanford University scientists, have spent 2 ½ years working on this defect. Since the late 1970s, scientists around the world have cracked the genetic codes of only a bandful of the thousands of buman genes that tell cells how to manufacture biochemicals and proteins like insulin, interferon, human growth hormone and somatostatin. Those codes are then used to mass-produce copies of the genes to explore their functions and, in some cases, their potential use as therapies.

Project leader Dr. Theodore Friedmann confirmed the discovery of the human gene that, when damaged, leads to Lesch-Nyhan Syndrome. The syndrome strikes about one in 100,000 hirths. Its victims become mentally retarded and physically frail and often mutilate themselves.

Friedmann's associates at the University of California campus here included Dr. Douglas Jolly and a technician, Abby Esty. Assistance was provided by two Stanford scientists, 1980 Nobel laureate (in chemistry) Dr. Paul Berg and Dr. Hiroto Okayama.

The achievement is "a wonderful thing," according to Dr. William Nyhan, a University of California at San Diego pediatrician who co-discovered the disease in the early 1960s but was not part of the project.

"I've known about Ted's (Friedmann's) work from the beginning, and I think he should be very proud and satisfied in this success in research." Nyhan said. "All of us take considerable pride in the fact it was done here."

France beefs up broadcasts, could soon rival the BBC

PARIS (LOS)—Bashis France International, the station that selfs France to the rest of the world, is to he vigosously expanded after years of neglect. Ministerial approval has been given to a five-fold budget increase by 1985 to bring it in line with the British Broadcasting Corporation's external services. Broadcasting output will rise from 125 hours a week to 739 hours—20 more than the BBC's, while nine times more staff than at present will be taken on.

Hard news and news feature programs will be given priority for the first time, and additional facilities are being fleveloped to broadcast to Latin America, Sou '-East Asia and the Middle East, English-language programs to Africa will be stepped up in an attempt to break the BBC's near monopoly in Britain's former colonies.

The plan has been drawn up by the new head of the RFL Herve Bourges. His personal record is an important factor in the French Socialist government's determination that the French point of view will be put across in the Third World.

Until his appointment at RFI, he was press spokesman for the director general of UNESCO, and one of the most ardent supporters of UNESCO's controversial code for reporting from the Third World.

A former editor of a weekly in France, Bourges was also adviser to the Algerian presidency and founder of the Yaounde School of Journalism in the Cameroons.

When he arrived at the Maison de la Radio in Paris he discovered what he described as a "horrifying situation." The external services had become a dumping ground for journalists from the state hroadcasting system who were considered unacceptable elsewhere by the previous rightwing government because of their political views, trade union activity or

A steady decline in the number of broadcasting hours had reduced RFI to 28th position in the world's external radio service

tion in the world's external radio service league, trailing behind Egypt and Albania. The worst discovery was that the station was self-consumed, considering itself a section of the foreign ministry, which pays half its current budget of about $15 million. It depended heavily on pop music and quiz games and broadcast in only five languages.

A new policy of what Bourges describes as "vigorous news" was first tested by frank reporting of African crises, including the arrest of politicians in Gabon, France's main source of uranium. Protests from Gabon were oversided. For the first time in memory, an African country friendly to France had not been able to impose its views on RFI.

Journalists believe that bad reporting from RFI has been responsible for the worsening of African crises in the past, notably in Chad, Bourges says that RFI had to bend to the will of French ministries, who treated its journalists "like civil servants."

The Socialist government leafs that if RFI gains a reputation for honest reporting, its new stature could serve France's Third World policy, which is aimed particularly at Africa and South America.

So the number of journalists and production staff will be increased from 174 to 1,500 over the next five years while the number of freelances will be increased from 150 to 500.

Services to Africa and Eastern Europe have been inerged to end old rivalries and will eventually function 24 hours a day with emphasis on news programs.

STOP KILLING YOURSELF

Steincrohn

By Peter J.

Dear Dr. Steincrohn: I am 56. My problem is poor circulation in my legs. My doctor tells me the trouble is arteriosclerosis.

When I walk I either have to slow up to a crawl or actually stop when the pain in my leg comes on. So far I've tried all kinds of exercises.

Dr. Frank Schofield traced the cause of mysterious internal bleeding in sheep. It was due to spoiled sweet-clover they were feeding on. The responsible agent in this was an anticiotting substance called bishydroxyoumarin.

bishydroxycoumarin.

It's now available in synthetic form for treatment and prevention of disorders in humans in which there is excessive clotting.

For Mrs. O.: The reason for withholding food and fluids before operation is to lessen regurgitation and aspiration of the stomach's contents into the lungs. This is one way to prevent pneumonia as a complication following anesthesia.

For Mrs. K.: Your doctor isn't being a scaremonger in suggesting that your daughter who has mononucleosis should rest in bed for at least a week. Serious cases need even more rest.

Kissing disease, as this is sometimes called, is often overlooked. Be thankful your doctor has made the diagnosis which is often missed as being just a severe sore throat that requires only aspirin — and no need for rest. The liver bears the brunt of the attack.

Although most patients recover, at least from 30 to 35 people die from it each year in the United States. According to Dr. David T. Purtilo, professor of pathology at the University of Massachusetts Medical Center, Worcester, the problem is due to misdiagnosis and lack of understanding that mononucleosis is a potentially serious desease.

Used for eavesdropping

KGB 'post' in U.S. filmed

Soviet-owoed estate in Glen Cove, New York, serves not just as a recreational facility for Soviet personnel assigned to the United Nations hut also as an electronic eavesdropping post, according to a television documentary on the KGB.

The 13-part, Caoadian-produced series was scheduled to have its U.S. premiere Monday evening on "Independent Network News," a program carried by more than 70 U.S. television stations unaffiliated with the three major

The documentary focuses on North American operations of the KGB, the massive Soviet espiooage and secret police apparatus which combines both foreign intelligence and internal security functions.

Since the mid-1970s, there have been press reports aboot Soviet microwave interception of U.S. telephone conversations and other communications by use of advanced electrooic equipment at the Soviet Embassy in Washington and the Soviet consulate in San Similar electronic intercept operations, the television documentary reports, are also being conducted at Soviet diplomatic support facilities including a New York city apartmeot building and the Soviet-owned estate in Gleo Cove, New York.

In an interview on the program, Arkady

Soviet official at the U.N. when defected to the United States in April 1978, vividly described the Glen Cove site.

"All the top floors of the building are full of sophisticated equipment...to intercept all conversations, telephone conversations on anything which is going on ... At least 15 or 17 technicians were warking ... to do all this job." Richard Kinsey, former deputy chief on the FBT's Soviet counterintelligence division, said in another interview that targets of the Glen Cove eavesdropping operation apparently included a Grumman Aerospace Corp. Aircraft plant on Long Island.

The Soviet estate, he said, "is sort of midway between the main plant and a testing facility that Grumman has further out on the island, and those antennae are pointed loward both facilities." The program also indicates that electronic intercept equipment also bas been installed by the Soviets at their apartment building in the Riverdale section of Bronx, New York, located oo ooe of the highest elevations in New York city. Other aspects of KGB operations covered by the documentary include recruitment of American agents, covert acquisition of sensitive high-technology items and "disinformation" activities intended to plant Sovietfabricated material in the Western press.

Leprosy said increasing

LONDON, April 26 (AP) — Leprosy is increasing in Western countries as well as in the Third World, says Dr. Richard Dawood, a Briton who studied the disease in the United States. There are between 25,000 and 30,000 cases in Europe, at least 400 in Britain and more than 3,000 in the United States, the doctor stated in the latest issue of the Monthly Index of nedical specualitis, known as MIMS.

Three-quarters of the 200 new cases a year in the United States are foreign born. but there are still local disease areas in Texas, California. Hawaii. Florida and Louisiana, he wrote, Dawood said most lepers in Britain are immigrants, 70 percent being Asians and the 20 to 30 new cases a year in this country fluctuate with the pattern of immigration. There is no record of the disease passing from one person to another in Bri-

Canadians test charter

OTTAWA, April 26 (AP) - In its first week of life, Canada's charter of rights and freedoms - cornerstone of its new constitution - has been invoked in several cases.

True to the predictions of lawyers and constitutional experts, the infant charter was hauled into action as soon as courts opened last Monday, just two days after Queen Elizabeth II proclaimed the constitution

The flurry of first-week action foreshadows years of legal maneuvering as cases filter up from lower courts to the Supreme Court of Canada, where the country's top judges will have to decide exactly what the charter means for Canadians

Supreme Court Justice Willard Estey predicted that it will take about a decade to pin down the implications. The Supreme Court will soon reach "a new plateau of activity," he told a luncheon in London, Ontario, where two of the first cases based on the charter surfaced.

One defense lawyer in London successfully used the guarantee of "a fair and public hear-ing" to win an adjournment until his client, charged with impaired driving, had undergone a neurological examination. But Roger Tasseg, deputy federal justice minister, said the lewyer likely would have been granted his request even without the charter.

In the second case, a lawyer argued that police had exceeded their powers by search-suspect without a warrant. The judge rejected the argument — which was based on constitutional protections against "unreasonable search and seizure" because the charger was not in effect when the search was conducted.

The question of retroactivity is one of the key issues to be decided in the coming months. The foderal government argues the charter applies only as of one second after midnight April 17, the day the queen signed the proclamation.

Most of the early cases have dealt with fundamental feedoms, such as freedom of speech, or legal rights in dealing with the police and courts.

- In Ottawa, the Canadian Union of Public Employees announced plans to challenge a New Brunswick law forcing 3,000 striking school employees back to work. The law prohibits picketing, parading or demonstrating at or near government offices and gives the government power to request decer-tification of the wokers' union. Lawyers for the union say that violates the freedoms of association and peaceful assembly,

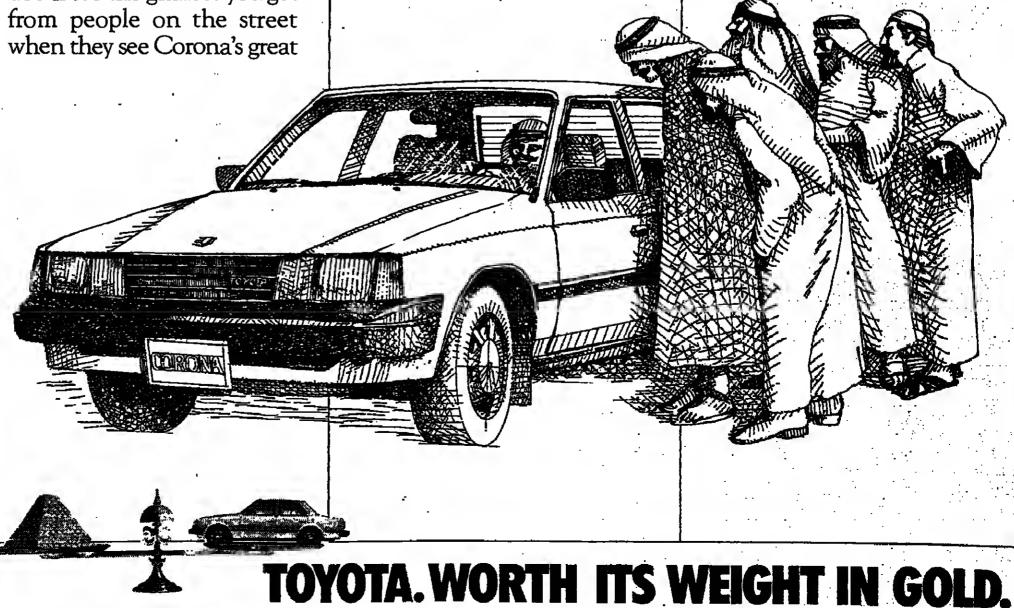

- The Canadian Civil Liberties Association is using the charter's guarantee of freedom of expression in defense of Netl Fraser, e federal civil servent fired for speaking out against the government-orderd conversion to the metric system.

U.N. panel suggests Korean truce talks

Continand in Korca Monday proposed a meeting of the joint Korean Military Armistice Commission (MAC) to be held May 4 at the truce village of Panmunjom, a command spekesman said.

The proposal was made by U.S. Rear Adm. James G. Storms, senior U.N.C. delegate of the armistice commission, in his message to his North Korean counterpart, Maj. Gen. Han Juhkyong, the spokesman said. It was the American-led command's counterproposal to an earlier North Korean request that a meeting of the commission be held

North Kotea did not give any reason for calling the meeting. It came two days after the command charged North Korea for initiating a four-hour firefight between the two opposing sides across the demilitarized zone last Wednesday.

South Korea said North Koreans began the shooting to halt four North Korean soldiers from delecting to the South of the castern front, 80 kms north of Chunchon, east of Scoul.

suffered "some casualties" from the shooting. South Korea said there were no casualties among its personnel, but the North Korean shooting caused minor damage to a harbed-wire fence near a South Korean guard post in the southern portion of the truce zone.

U.S. Vice President George Bush, currently on a three-day visit to South Korea, said Monday in a speech before the South Korean National Assembly that North Koreans killed the four as they were on "their way to freer soil." There was no immediate North Korean response to the new U.N. Command proposal.

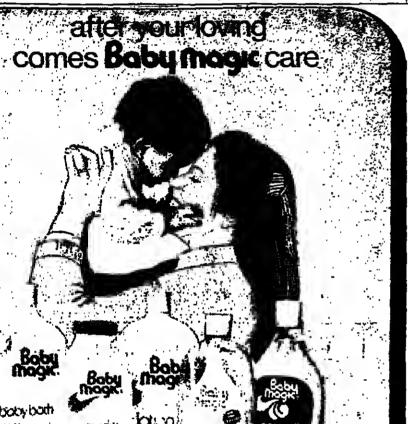

Meanwhile, North Korean President Kim li-Sung has called for a strengthening of his country's army. The North Korean Central News Agency monitored in Tokyo Sunday, quoted him as telling a banquet Sunday: "The developments in South Korea today show that the moves of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges toward a new war against us have reached a critical stage and brought the situation to the brink of war."

Swiss women denied vote

APPENZELL, Switzerland, April 26 (AP) — The all-male electorate of Switzerland's least populous canton (state) decided overwhelmingly Sunday to continue denying women the vote in town and cantonal

A show of hands was taken at the colorful, outdoor "landsgemeinde," the annual popular assembly that acts on the canton's important issues. It is open to all of the 5,000 male, adult citizens of Appenzell -Innerrhoden canton - provided each carries a sword or bayonet.

Spectators, including local women and hundreds of foreign tourists, reacted with boos and laughter on Landesgemeinde Square here as the show of hands indicated the men by a 4-1 margin favored continuing the policy.

In a brief debate before the vote, a young man in the assembly said that the right to vote was not necessary for Appenzell women since they fully trusted men to take care of their interests.

The rejection came 18 months after a narrowly passed amendment to the federal constitution specified that both men and women are strictly equal before the law.

The predominantly Roman Catholic eanton, which has a population of about 13,000, thus remained the last male bastion in the Swiss confederation to deny its women the vote in cantonal and communal Communist ruler Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski has warned the West against erecting an economic "iron curtain" around Poland in the wake of last December's start of martial

Jaruzeiski, in a speech to the party's policy-forming central committee released here Sunday said "an iron curtain - hut not one of our making - is being huilt up again" in an apparent reference to U.S. economic aid sanctions.

"If the capitalist countries and their financial and economic factors want us to pay back our debts, to fulfill our commitments, they should not - in their own interest - hlock our import possibilities for much longer because the result could be limiting our growth of production and export." Jaruzelski said in the speech delivered Friday.

The speech capped a series of comment by Polish officials who have sought to remind the West that boycotting Poland's economy could be to their own disadvantage.

Although Poland bas stressed repeatedly its reliance on the Soviet bloc's common market, Comecon, Polish officials apparently are still interested in maintaining economic contacts with their Western partners.

Some officials have said that the only way to repay Poland's estimated $26 billion debt to Western creditors is to borrow more money for the time being to provide badly needed raw materials and components to keep Polish factories operative.

Jaruzelski spoke at the conclusion of last week's two-day central committee meeting, the second since he declared martial law last Dec. 13. The plenum was devoted to economic problems. His speech was not publisbed in state-run press Saturday, and

New car engine piston developed

LONDON. April 26 (AFP) - A new car engine piston giving five percent greater power yield while redncing fuel consumption four percent was announced here by Associated Engineering.

Improved efficiency stems from cutting the contact surface by 75 percent or so, leading to a 14 percent reduction in friction losses. The company noted that about 30 percent of losses in engines due to friction came from the pistons. This was true of both diesel and gasoline engines.

The company, a leading British vehicle component maker, is marketing the new piston under the name "Aeconoguide".

LONDON, April 26 (AP) - Unemployment in Britain, already Prime Minister Marearet Thatcher's biggest economic worry, will rise from around 3 million to 4.5 million, or nearly one worker in five, by 1990, Cambridge University economists forecast Mon-

In its annual review of the British economy, the department of applied economics at Cambridge urged Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative government to abandon its cautious financial strategy and reflate the economy by 7-8 billion pounds ($12-14 billion) n year fur the next three or four years.

The economists also recommended a devaluation of the pound sterling and controls on imports, wages and foreign exchange transactions. "The country remains in a deep and prolonged slump ... threre is no serious prospect of economic recovery in the short or longer term unless policies change," the report said.

It warned of potential strife between haves and have-nots as unemployment worsens from its current 2.992 million, or 12.5 percent of the work force.

Growth set at 4.4% Asian states make headway

MANILA, April 26 (Depthnews) - As the world slowly nicks itself up from the economic slump of previous years, Asia-Pacific nations, it appears, may look forward to an impressive growth rate in 1982.

A highly optimistic report on Asian conomic trends prepared by the economic research department of Chemical Bank in the U.S. predicts that the region "will again he among the fastest-growing areas in the world" this year. Its projected gross national product (GNP) growth rate of about 4.4 percent represents a modest improvement from last year's 4 percent.

The report even forecasts that growth in developing Asia will surpass that of all other regions including the three developed countries in the area itself. Estimated growth rate for developing Asia in 1982 is 5.7 percent. higher than last year's 4.9 percent.

Covered by the report are Japan, Australia and New Zealand, the three countries in the region identified as developed; and Communist China. Hong Kong, India, Indonesia. Malaysia, Pakistan, Papua New Guinea, the Philippines, Singapore, South Korea, Sri Lanka, Taiwan and Thailand, which compose developing Asia.

The report's optimistic tone is almost consistent for all nations covered predicting moderate or, at the very least, stable growth rates. Only Papus New Guinea is expected to. experience a drop in real growth due to falling export earnings. The country which had a growth fall of 2 percent last year is predicted to register a decline of 2.5 percent in real growth in 1982.

The slowdown in Indonesia's growth rate is expected to continue this year with the level dropping from last year's 8.5 percent to 7.5 percent in 1982. This further deceleration of the country's real growth is supposed to be brought about by sluggish oil exports.

In making its prediction, the report is pinning its optimism, however, on modest upturns in economic growth of the U.S. and Europe, whose developments are still strongly linked to those of the Asian region.

Two other major factors, which the report expects to influence the region's economic outlook, are prospects for world oil and commodity prices.

"Improvement in these areas should help Asia's growth inflation and external accounts," the report says.

This year's surge in bankruptcies, a 55 percent increase over the same period last year. comes on the heels of a dismal 45.2 percent increase in bankruptcies during 1981, according to Dun and Bradstreet, the New York economic research firm.

Recessions traditionally result in a large number of business failures and the backto-back recessions of 1980 and 1981 have been blamed for much of the current corpurate problems.

But what distorbs some economists and government officials about the current situation is the kind of companies that are folding. In the past, very small firms have been the hardest hit. But this year, some medium to large-sized companies are in severe jeopardy.

Dun and Bradstreet figures reveal that dur-ing the first 14 weeks of the year, bankruptcies among companies worth more than $100,000 are up 60 percent over a year ago.

Hardships caused by a slump in revenue last year are so great that the government is adopting a new approach to development with decisions that would not bave been politcally acceptable in the past.

Immediately after its independence from Portugal in 1975, Angola aligned itself with the Soviet bloc and shunned credit, believing debt would inevitably bring political dependence. Once determined to pay cash against delivery, the south-west African nation is now seeking long-term credits.

Lower oil prices sparked the change in attitude in Angola where all economic projections were based on higher returns, with prices as high as $36 a barrel in 1980. With the world price for crude now as low as $27 a barrel, the country faces a substantial budget deficit and a foreign exchange crisis.

The financial committee of the Angolan People's Assembly (parliament) has been summoned to seek ways of reducing the hudget deficit and Finance Minister Ismael Martins, asked by Reuters whether Luanda might try to raise a foreign loan, said; "this cannot be excluded."

Martins said that the government had received numerous offers of credit from U.S. and European banks in recent months and Western bankers said the largest had come from Chase Manhattan, whose former chairman, David Rockefeller, visited Angola in February. Another U.S. bank, Bankers' Trust, has also offered Angola a small credit line. according to banking sources. Both banks took part in a $50 million loan to the Angolan subsidiary of Gulf, the U.S. oil company, in 1981.

Iraq pipeline reopens

ANKARA, April 26(R) - Iraq's only working oil pipeline to the Mediterranean was reopened Monday after being closed Sunday hecause of a leak, the Turkish energy minis-

The pipeline runs from Kirkuk in Iraq carrying around 27,000 tons of crude per year (540,000 barrels per day). The ministry said it did not know what had caused the leak. Iraq has relied on the link through Turkey to the Mediterranean since Syria recently closed the pipeline from Iraq to the ports of Banivas and Tripoli in Lehanon.

In another development, Iraqi Oil Minister Tayeh Abdul Karım has accused Syria of lying when it asserted Iraq was paying only $20 million a year in pipeline fees to have its oil pumped through Syria.

In an Iraqi news agency dispatch monitored here. Karim said the pipeline agreement called for a minimum annual payment of $37 million even if pumping stopped. Pumping fees for Syria amounted to $130 million, he said, even though Syria only allowed tracto export an amount of crude oil equal to 70 percent of the pipeline's capacity.

Syria recently shut down the pipeline, which carries Iraqi oil across Syria to the Ports of Baniyas, Syria, and Tripoli, Leba-non. Karim said the sbutoff amounted to effective Syrian participation in the war of aggression against Iraq launched by Imperialism, Zionism and the Iranians.

Dollar rates lose ground

By J.H. Hammond

Jeddah, April 26 - The American dollar opened on a weak note on the European exchanges Monday, losing ground to the major continental currencies with the exception of the pound. Sterling fell back sharply to 1.7520 levels when the London markets opened with the British currency reacting to the worsening conflict over the Falkland Islands after the armed confrontation over South Georgia. Some determined Bank of England support helped sterling to stabilize and it later was traded at the Friday closing levels of 1.7690.

The hullion markets had a nervous and busy day Monday with gold prices rising sharply to reach $ 364 in London compared with $351 closing levels in New York on Friday. Silver also rose in sympathy with gold, adding more than 20 cents to trade at 7.45 levels.

In the local markets, riyal deposit levels eased back slightly to shed some of the rises recorded Sunday with the one-month JIBOR deposit rates quoted at 12 %-13 % percent compared tol 3% percent levels Sunday. The longer dated funds remained more stable at 13% - 13% percent for the one-year but week-fixed funds also fell back to 111/2 percent levels from 121/4 percent Sunday. In the local exchanges, trading was thin and cautious with spot riyal/dollar rates averaging at 3.4303-05 levels and interbank dealing restricted to a few transac-

The European exchanges also registered

a nervous trading day with the dollar losing ground on both the exchange and money markets. Eurodollar deposit rates eased by a further 1/8 percent in most tenors with the Europeans reacting to Friday night's fall in the weekly American money supply figures of $1.9 billion. Rates steadied by the end of the European session hut all eyes were fixed on New York and on what the Federal Reserve Board might do next on the interest rate front after last week's Eurodollar deposit falls

In the exchanges, the German mark made a significant recovery to trade at 2.3703 levels compared with 2.4190 last Monday, while the French frane also made a rapid rise to trade at nearly 6.1810 levels compared with 6.2810 a week ago. The other currencies gains against the dollar were no less dramatic, with the Japanese yen trading comfortably at 237.30 compared with 246.80 levels a week ago, and the Swiss franc at 1.9580 compared to last Monday's 1.9790 levels. Throughout the day there was little central bank support intervention detected with the European banks sitting on the side line and watching the exchanges push down the value of the

Freight market tastes mixed fortune

LONDON, April 26 (AFP) - 1t was a mixed hag on the freight market last week, despite continuing widespread inquiry from Soviet, Communist Chinese. South Korean and South African charterers.

The situation in the South Atlantc was being carefully watched, and there was little new husiness heing quoted out of the River Plate. But brokers reported grain fixtures out of the Argentine to West Germany, Venezuela and Algeria.

Soviet interest re-appeared just in front of the week-end, after a few days' absence, with fixtures reported for both Pacific and Atlantic round voyages, Although details were scanty, it is believed that one vessel, a 27,500 tonner, was booked to replace a Soviet ship for a round voyage via U.S. West Coast, giving redelivery at Nakhodka, for $4600 a day. A smaller vessel was taken in the Atlantic for a round voyage giving delivery and redelivery at Cape Passero (Sicily) for $5,000 day. China took more grain vessels out of the U.S. Gulf on a single voyage hasis, paying the which might be been expected after weekend developments in the Falklands dispute and most of the leaders ended a penny or two either side of Friday's close, dealers added. Lloyds, with extensive interests in Argentina, lost 12p to 406p in lower banks.

Gold shares ended below early highs as the hullion price fell hack below $360 while North Americans generally firmed.

As with the leading industrials, government bonds were marked down at the start and then traded quietly to end with losses of around 4 point, dealers said, previous week's former rate of $33.75 a ton for 30,000 tonners. In addition these charterers booked tonnage to lift hulk wheat from British Columbia, the first such fixing for some considerable time.

Noticeably, the Chinese continued to ignore the time-charter section. But the South Africans were husy booking vessels on a time basis and although there were doubts whether some deals had gone through at least one fixture was concluded to Europe. The South Koreans were reported taking a 35,000 tonner from Chile at $7.000 day, plus $300,000 ballast bonus, and a 26,000 tonner from Karachi at $6,200 day.

76ers nip Bucks in close tie

NEW YORK, April 26 - The Milwaukee Bucks never really lost sight of the Philadelphia 76ers, except in the last period.

And this lapse was enough for the 76ers to break away from their shadow to begin their National Basketball Association Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series impressively. Philadelphia, enjoying home court advantage, romped to a 125-122 verdict to take a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven series. The man to whom the 76ers turned to for the much-needed impetus to elude the Bucks was none other than their prolific scorer, Julius Erving. And Erving justified their confidence. He scored 34 points and started a late, final quarter eight-point rally that trig-gered the 76ers ahead of the Bucks. And the Bucks failed to catch up with them thereafter. The match followed a topsy-turvy course and the pattern of the match was set in the first quarter with the Bucks finishing three points ahead(38-35). But a second quarter spurt by the 76ers saw the Bucks trail into halftime by a point (66-67). The lead switched hands hy the end of the third quarter with the Bucks now ahead by a point (98-97). The Bucks managed to hold onto a slender lead as the 76ers kept pace with them. But Erving's hurst turned the tide.

The second Eastern Conference semifinal playoff series pitted the winningest team in the regular season, Boston Celtics, and the Washington Bullets. And the Bullets were no match for the Celtics' firepower.

Celtics began its hid for a second consecutive NBA championship with a bang. It gunned down the Bullets' aspirations with a third quarter recovery and a final 109-91 victory at home. And it was the veterans, M.L.Carr and Nate Archibald, who sparked a decisive third-period rally.

The Bullets offsel its first quarter twopoint deficit with a second quarter hurst. But after the interval it was the Celtics who were seen more on the offensive. With the Bullets slowly yielding ground, the Celtics built up a comfortable lead and coasted the rest of the

Phil Thompson named captain

Injured Keegan forced out of squad to play Wales

Keegan became England's latest casualty Monday, forced out of the squad for Tuesday's British Championship game with Wales in Cardiff by disc trouble in his back.

'Kevin has gone straight back to Southampton" said manager Ron Greenwood after naming a side that shows five changes from the team that thrashed Northern Ireland 4-0 at Wembley earlier this year.

As predicted, Joe Corrigan is given a rare opportunity in goal. Liverpool's Phil Neal returns at right hack to team up with Antield colleague Phil Thompson named as captain by Greenwood in Keegan's absence.

Thompson also missed the game against Ireland and he now forms a new central defence pairing with Terry Butcher, of Ipswich. Up front Aston Villa striker Peter Withe has been given an opportunity to stake a claim for a permanent spot before the World Cup finals in June.

Greenwood, meanwhile, said that he had contemplated giving Keegan a rest anyway" against the Welsh, But he is nevertheless deeply concerned by the injury. Greenwood added: "Kevin mentioned Sunday night that he had back ache and Fred Street gave him treatment, but it got worse and when he woke up this morning he could hardly get ont of bed, he didn't train". MADRID, April 26 (Agencies) -Severiano Ballesteros of Spain thrilled his home crowd when he won the Madrid Open Golf Championsbip by one stroke after finishing with a four-nnder-par 68 for a 273 total, here Sunday

In a tense finish, Ballesteros was in a bunker at the 18th hut did well to edge out compatriot Jose Maria Canizares, who led by twu shots overnight. Ballesteros, former holder of the British Open and U.S. Masters titles and winner of this event two years ago, collected 7,500 sterling ($13,500) Canizares won 5,000 sterling ($ 9,000) for finishing second.

Another Spaniard Antonio Garrido, winner of the Tunisian Open a weck ago, finished third on 275 after a 69 while Vicente Fcrnandez of Argentina picked up seven birdies for a 67 to take fourth spot on 278. He had a double bogey six at the eighth. Scotsman Sam Torrance, fifth on 280, was the leading British finisher. Ballesteros took the lead with birdie threes at the ninth to be out in 33. He dropped a stroke at the short 11th hut picked up more birdies at the par-four 13th and the 15th, where he boled from five meters, then held on at the last where he was bunkered hut holed from two meters.

Meanwhile, a flooded golf course produced another delay in the weather-plagued New Orleans Open Sunday and set the tournament schedule back another full day.

The $400,800 event, which has lost two days' play to rains and floods and has not yet gone through two full rounds, now is scheduled in end on Tuesday - two days later than the original schedule. The format now calls for the completion of the second round Monday morning, at which time the field will be cut to the low 60 scorers, new pairings made and the players sent out for the third round. The fourth round is scheduled for Tuesday. All of that, of course, is on the condition that there is no more rain and the Lakewood Country Club course is playable.

The layout was under water Sunday morning. A couple of lakes on the course had overflowed their banks and put greens, tees and fairways under several inches of water. It was the second time in four days the course had been flooded. Thursday's play also was canceled due to standing water on the course.

Thirty players, trying to finish their second round of play, were stranded by rains and huilding floods Saturday afternoon. They marked their position on the course and will resume play from that point Monday morning. Until they finish, until all second-round scates are posted, the qualifying score for the tinal two rounds cannot be determined.

It seemed almost certain, however, that Jack Nicklaus would fail to make it for the third time in his last four starts. Nicklaus finished off a second round 76 in a driving rain Saturday and had a 36-hole total of 147. 3-over par.

That's 11 shors back of Scott Hoch, who shot a second-round 69 and finished two rounds at 136, 8-under par. His score seemed certain to stand up as the 36-hole lead. Of those on the course. Steve Melnyk was in the best positon. He was four under for the tournament with only three hules to go.

Australian Bob Shearer, who scored his first American victory last week in Tallahassee, was one shot off the lead at 157, after a 71. Tom Jenkins was another stroke back at 138 after a 69.

The group at 139 included Larry Ziegler, Gary Koch, Lor, Hinkle and Jun Sumons, Koch had a second-round 68, Hinkle 69, Zigler and Simons 71 Ton: Watson, who won this even the last two years, shot a second round 70 and was five back at 141. In Orlando, Florida, Patty Sheejian sink a

AMSTERDAM, Netherlands, April 26 (Agencies) — Lowly NEC of Nijmegen caused a major upset this weekend in the Dutch Honor Soccer Division, trouncing a listless and uninspired Feyenoord of Rotterdare 5-1 before 6,000 spectators.

With only four matches left in the competition, the loss enlarges the possibility that the renowned Rotterdam side will be excluded from European Cup play next season for the first time in its history.

John Vievermans scored twice for NEC. with Frans Janssen and the West German Guenther Kurek adding the goals for Nijmegen, while Wim Van Til scored in his own goal. Sjaak Troost scored the lone Feyenoord

FC Utrecht confirmed the demotion of the Graafschap of Doetinchem by winning 5-0 before 6,000 spectators. A total of three clubs will be demoted from the top division

Meanwhile, Real Sociedad of San Sebastian qualified for the European Champions' Soccer Cup for the second year running by beating Athletic Bilbao 2-1 in an all-Basque contest last weekend to snatch the Spanish First Division soccer title.

In Porto Alegre, Brazil, Flamengo of Rio De Janeiro won Brazil's National Soccer Championship Sunday with a 1-0 victory over Gremio, the hometown team. The win means Flamengo has won the World Club Championship, played last year in Tokyo, and the State and National Championships in the last 12 months.

Coach Tele Santana was waiting for the game to announce his choices for the last five berths on his All-Star team, which will represent Brazil in the World Cup. He planned to make the announcement Monday, but he was expected to call up All-Sar regulars Leandro, Junior and Zico, from Flamengo, and Paulo Isidoro, from Gremio.

The fifth spot was in doubt. Santana was expected to choose among Batista from Gremio, and Adilio and Vitor from Flamengo. None of the three stood out in the game Sunday.

Injury denies Dutch girl triple crown

BUDAPEST, April 26 (AFP) - Bettine Vriesekoop of the Netherlands won the women's singles event at the European Table Teonis Championships here when she beat England's Jill Hammersley 21-16, 8-21, 21-18, 21-23, 21-16.

The 21 year-old Vriesekoop had previously won the European junior title twice and was bronze medalist at the 1980 Championships in Bern. On Saturday with Andrzej Grubba of Poland, she won the mixed doubles title.

Vriesekoop, who has been favorite, snatched only a narrow victory in the first set against 31 year-old Hammersley. The English player responded by taking the second set by the clear cut margin of 2t-8.

The Dutchwoman recovered her poise in the third, then succumbed narrowly in the fourth after, point-for-point battle. Io the vital fifth set both players sensed victory and Vriesekoop had to struggle to down Hammersley 21-16.

Jumping for joy after winning the match, Vriesekoop fell and injured an ankle and withdrew from the women's double thereby losing the chance of carning a triple crown. Vriesekoop was to partner Sandra de Kruiff against Soviet pair of Flura Bulatova and Inna Kovalenko, who will collect the gold medal for a walkover victory. The Dutch pair will receive the silver. Dragutin Surbek and Zoran Kalinic of Yugoslavia won the men's doubles title beating Hungarian pair 1stvan Jonyer and Gabor Gergely 2t-15, 2t-t7, 2t-15. Meanwhile, it was announced in Jakarta that a Chinese sports team is to play in Indonesia for the first time in 19 years at the Asian Table Tennis Championships from May 24 to June 3.

Chairman of the Indonesian Table Tennis Association, Justice Minister Ali said, the Indonesian Government had approved China's participation in the tournament along with 35 other foreign countries.

Indonesia has yet to resume diplomatic ralatinns with China, broken off in 1966 over China's suspected involvement io a 1965 coup attempt. He said approval had been given on condition that the Chinese players' visit should not be misued for political or semi-political purposes. China, holder of all seven World Table Tennis title has announced it will send 15 players and nine officials. China last sent athletes here in 1963 to take part in the games of the new emerging forces (Ganefo), pioneered by the late President Sukarno, but not repeated since.

Poland to restore self-rule in factories

WARSAW, April 26 (Agencies) — The Polish regime has announced it will gradually put into effect self-management of factories by their employees, a reform suspended when martial law was proclaimed last Dec. 13. This was decided by the plenary session of the Communist Party central committee that met Thursday and Friday

A resolution made public Saturday oight said the goal of economic reform is to boost efficiency and eliminate the old system of hureaucratic management and planning completely.

But the central committee insisted that the Communist Party should have a right to oversee coterprises wheo they manage themselves. The reactivization of the selfmanagement reform is to take place "gradually as propitious political, economic and organizational conditions arise in enterprises."

The central committee recommended that Communist Party members work with management to nominate candidates for the self-management bodies "chosen among the best workers, the most competent and the most responsible." This indicated that the membership of self-management committees already set up by the now suspended inde-peodeot labor federation "solidarity" will be modified.

The central committee also said it is "indispensable" to intensify efforts to introduce self-financing of state enterprises. To enable them to pay for themselves, enterprises must educate workers in economics so they will boost their productivity and jobs will answer "production needs", the resolution

This indicated that excess work forces in factories will be reduced. ("The party's duty is to see that the process of moving manpower takes place in conformity with principles of social justice," the resolution stated.) The central committee (the party's parliament) also approved the principle of competitive examinations for the positions of enterprise directors and heads of "industrial trust"

The principle of self-management was first approved last July, but the questioo of how much self-management to allow was the subject of sharp cootroversy between Solidarity and the regime. The resolution admitted there are obstacles to reforming the ecocomy: shortages of supplies, and a feeling of "powerlessness that has not yet been surmouoted everywhere. Miods must adapt to

America to lift Guatemala ban

NEW YORK, April 26 (AFP) - The United States bas eoded its arms emhargo oo Guatemala, clamped down four years ago by President Jimmy Carter because of the Ceotral American country's hreach of buman rights, The New York Times reported.

The newspaper, quoting official sources, said that the U.S. administration decided to end the arms freeze as a gesture to the mooth-old regime of Geo. Efrain Rois Montt which is respecting human rights.

The United States is expected to approve the sale of $4 million in spare parts for U.S. made helicopters being used by the Guatemala Army against leftist rebels. It could also restore a $50,000 military training fund, and was hoping "to resume support for loans to Guatemala in the loter-Americao Development Bank and other financial institutions, The New York Times said.

A State Department spokesman said on Friday that the U.S. administration was happy at "positive measures" takeo by the New Guatemala regime in the fields of human rights and in the struggle against "violence and corruptioo". The spokesman, asked about ending the arms embargo, replied: "We are carefully studying this ques-new maoagemeot mechanisms which demand initiative and ingenuity."

In another development, Poland's martial law ruler Gen. Wojciech Jaruzelski met Sunday with Roman Catholic primate Jozef Glemp before Glemp left for the Vatican, the Polish oews agency PAP reported.

PAP gave no details of the unexpected meeting, which was held at a government housing complex in central Warsaw. Most observers speculated the two leaders met to discuss solutions to the political stalemate that has developed since the start of martial law. The meeting is only the second official session to be reported here since Jaruzelski declared martial law. The meeting took place in the same house where Glemp and Jaruzelski met with interned Solidarity unioo chief Lech Walesa last Nov. 4.

Glemp, who left Monday morning for the Vatican is expected to inform the Polish-born Pope John Paul II of the political situation here and discuss church strategy for dealing with the current crisis.

LONDON, April 26 (R) — Britain has taken a gamble in Falklands crisis by using force to regain the desolate island of South

Georgia after 22 days of Argentine occupation. Government officials said they were confident Sunday's swift military foray io

the South Atlantic would add muscle to Britain's bargaining position in negotiating a showdown. Britain's gamble is that the commando raid on South Georgia will yield military. political and diplomatic advantages that were lacking io two weeks of U.S.-sponsored oegotiations. But political analysts believe there is a risk Britain's first use of armed power overseas for 25 years could

They say it could make Argentina's ruling military junta more intransigent, help rally support for Buenos Aires from besitant Latin American neighbors, and conceivably wreck the already faltering U.S. mediation effort. Britain apparently decided to use force after concluding it would be impossible to secure Argentine political concessions without a show of strength, the analysts said.

The government has said since the crisis started that a formidable British naval force, dispatched immediately after Argentine troops seized the Falklands on April 2, would be ready to take action if diplomacy failed. Officials insisted the threat would have lacked credibility if Britain had failed to land commandos in South Georgia, and that Britain was still determined to negoti-

In deciding to take the island, Britain reckoned there would be minimal casualties and that South Geurgia could be isolated politically from the emotion-laden Falklands issue as a whole. Although Argentina. basing itself on former Spanish uwnership which it says it inherited, has laid claim to the Falklands for 150 years, it has no historic links with South Georgia, a Falklands dependency it claimed only in 1927.

Militarily, the capture of South Georgia provides a deep water anchorage, a helicopier lannch pad and a landing site for carrier-borne vertical take-off Harrier jets in an area where Britain has few logistical

Britain's foray into South Georgia could backfire

Britain now has to decide whether to do battle with an estimated 10,000 Argeotine troops, backed up by air and sea power, for the main Falklands or to wait for a second phase in the negotiating effort. A key factor is that winter is closing in and that already military operations are hampered by key winds and raging seas.

Further delay could force Britain to keep its fleet locked into a long blockade 8,000 miles from home, with a risk that time might work diplomatically in Argentina's favor, U.S. Secretary of State Alexander Haig's mediation almost crumbled at the weekend when Britaio reacted coldly to n new set of American proposals, including ideas Haig felt he could sell to Argentina.

The United States hoped to trade an Argentine withdrawal for the halting or recall of the British fleet, while an interim administration took over in the Falklands, leaving the crucial issue of sovereignty to be

While Britain has indicated readiness to accept some form of joint administration and even to yield sovereignty if the 1,800 islanders agree, its first demand is that Argentine troops must pull out initially, Argentine Foreign Minister Nicanor Costa

Mendez suspended negutiations and prist poned a planned meeting with Harg in Washington shortly after the South Genrgia attack was announced.

U.S. diplomats believe Britain's military action may not be enough to scuttle negotiations, but could make them even mure complex and tougher than before. If talks fail, the Thatcher government is expected to face heavy domestic pressure from the Labor Party opposition to take the conflict into the United Nations or to refer it for arbitration to the International Court of

But British ministers appear confident that a breakdown in negotiations would force the United States to side openly with Britain and impose sanctions which they think could shatter the Argentine economy and weaken the military junta's resolve.

Some observers believe the South Georgia attack may be enough to satisfy hardliners in Mrs. Thatcher's Conservative Party, and that she will now have a freer hand in negotiations. Mrs. Thatcher, so far backed by her European allies, must also weigh whether international support will hold up if Britain is involved in outright war with Argentina. This could be I decisive consideration in charting Britain's next move.

A major problem is ensuring accuracy in some of China's sparsely populated areas, he said. A test in one commone in the inner Moogolian desert showed an error of 0,09 percent, he said. China listed a population of 982.55 million at the end of 1980, based on its nationwide household registration system.

Chinese households are required to list all births and deaths on their official registrations, but authorities have acknowledged inaccuracies resulting from over-or underreporting or moves from one area to another.

The registrations affect such thiogs as issuance of grain and cotton ration coupons, iocentives for one-child families and punishments for three or more children under population control policies. Some people also do not live where they are registered. Getting permission to move into a big city is difficult because of efforts to hold down urban over-

The census form warns, "respondents must provide information honestly." Li said that in the pilot census in Wuxi, many children were reported who had not been registered.

He said the census takers hoped people would understand that information being gathered was important for ecocomic planoing and Cbioa's modernization campaign, and that honest reporting conformed with their own interests.

This is one theme of a large publicity campaign oow under way. Meanwhile, local authorities have been told to straighten out household registrations before the census.

Laser technology used Taipei produces combat jet

TAIPEI, April 26 (AFP) - Nationalist China's military industry has produced the prototype of a combat jet and is also developing a high-speed missile patrol Corvette, according to reports quoting military authorities here Monday.

There have been a series of announcements in recent months from the military authorities on the successful development of new weapons, apparently aimed at boosting morale following the recent refusal by the United States to supply Nationalist China (Taiwan) with advanced aircraft. Such information was previously considered confidential, and as such, was rarely made public.

Last week, the official Central Daily said that researchers in Taiwan's defense industry had made significant progress in applying laser technologyv to weapons systems.

Some locally made weapons, the paper said, were using lasers in their guidance sysThe paper cited an unidentified weapon using laser as guidance as having an accuracy of within five meters of the target." to help with the designing of the Corvettes. He said that research scientists and engineers would concentrate efforts in coming years on the development of high-yield explosives, and guided missiles, including laser-guided and automatically guided air-

3women jailed in German gang case BERLIN, April 26 (AP) - A West Berlin

court found three West German women guilty of having supported a criminal gang and sentenced them to prison terms between 45 and 54 months Monday. But the court acquitted the accused of charges they were members of the Baader-Meinhof and June 2

Movement terrorist gangs.

French police arrested Regina Nicolai, 27,
Karola Magg, 32, and Karin Kamp-Muennich, 26, io May, 1980, in one of two apartmeots the court said they rented and maintained in Paris as terrorist hases for the Red Army Faction, better known as the Baader-Meinhof Gaog, and the June 2 Movement.

For the same purpose, the court said, the trio rented another apartment in Milan, Italy. Wheo police raided the apartmeots, they found a workshop equipped for counterfietiog, ammunition, and large amounts of money, some of which police said was from the ransom paid for the release of kidnapped Austrian industrialist Walter Palmers in

The three suspects were not in court when the judge read the verdict. Miss. Nicolai received four-and-a-half years, the other two defeodants three years and nine months each. In 33 days of trial, the court said the prosecution failed to submit sufficient evidence to prove that the three accused were members of a criminal gang and personally participated in any terrorist acts. But they harbored a fanatical batted against the order prevailing in West Germany and had plotted to fight it with terrorist actions, the court said.

Alleged CIA spy jailed in Zambia LUSAKA; Zambia, April 26 (AP) - A former Zambian intelligence agent was jailed for 20 years Monday after being convicted of spying for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

Webster Lumbwe, 31, a former political officer in the Foreign Affairs Department and former member of the intelligence and security services, was convicted by the Lusaka High Court in camera of having passed information to the CIA "intended to be directly or indirectly useful to a foreign power from 1979 to 1981. Justice Wamulungwe Mainga sentenced Lumbwe, saying Lumbwe decided to work for the CIA because he was bitter about not being sent overseas. In June 1981, two American diplomats were accused of spying and expelled from Zambia. Lumbwe's case was apparently linked to that expulsion.
